

Luis Mintegui

Someone once ask me why I teach, and I replied, "Where could I find more splendid company?"

You must love young people to get the most out of them and do the most for them. I feel that my love for young people is the main reason I have stayed in teaching and coaching and have refused positions that would have been more lucrative perhaps.

As a former coach once said, you must love young people to get the most out of them and do the most for them.

Judy Elder (Wasmann)

I started teaching at Half Moon Bay when I was 22 years old and I continued there, with the exception of 3 years, for the next 34 years! I stayed because I loved the students and all the great people I worked with.

I made so many good friends there among the teachers, some of whom are still among my best friends. I had so many great times at Half Moon Bay. I loved working on the yearbook all those years, and I really enjoyed teaching Art and English (and even P.E. for one year!).

Now that I have retired from Half Moon Bay High School, I think how lucky I was to work there, to know all those students and fellow teachers, and I look back on it all with wonderful memories!
